Abstract:
The road history projects undertaken by the Virginia Center for Transportation Innovation and Research (formerly the Virginia Transportation Research Council) establish the feasibility of studies of early road networks and their use in the environmental review process. These projects, by gathering and publishing the early road orders of the vast parent counties and other significant areas, also lay the foundation for additional research by local groups over a broad area of Virginia.

This volume marks the twenty-ninth entry in the Historic Roads of Virginia series, initiated in 1973 by the Virginia Highway & Transportation Research Council (subsequently the Virginia Transportation Research Council, and now the Virginia Center for Transportation Innovation and Research). Loudoun County Road Orders 1783-1800 is a cooperative effort of the Virginia Center for Transportation Innovation and Research and independent researcher Patricia B. Duncan. This volume furthers the coverage of early northern Virginia transportation records begun in the previously published Loudoun County Road Orders 1757-1783, Fairfax County Road Orders 1749-1800, Frederick County Road Orders 1743-1772, and Orange County Road Orders 1734-1749.

This volume covers the period from the years immediately following the end of the Revolutionary War through the end of the 18th century. By the last half of the 18th century, Loudoun County was already one of the most populous and economically important counties in northern Virginia, and it contained major east-west and north-south transportation routes. The county’s early transportation records provide important information relating to transportation connections with not only neighboring counties and other southern counties in Virginia but also with the Washington, D.C., region and the adjoining states of Maryland and what is now West Virginia. This publication will have particular application to the cultural resource research relating to transportation projects in this area of northern Virginia. This information will eliminate the need for further research into the early Loudoun County road order records. If questions arise about early roads once a VDOT road improvement project is already underway (or nearly underway), primary historical research of this nature can take 6 to 12 months to complete. Therefore, this volume can be a source of potentially significant cost savings for VDOT, including the avoided costs of project delays and avoided consultant costs for cultural resource studies should questions arise.

_Loudoun County Road Orders 1783-1800_ is a cooperative project between Patricia B. Duncan and the Virginia Center for Transportation Innovation and Research (formerly the Virginia Transportation Research Council). It is the ninth volume of road orders produced cooperatively between a private group or individual and the Virginia Center for Transportation Innovation and Research and is the second volume of Loudoun County road orders, following _Loudoun County Road Orders 1757-1783_. The Loudoun County volumes follow similar projects with the Orange County Historical Society (which sponsored the production of _Orange County Road Orders 1734-1749_ and _Orange County Road Orders 1750-1800_); the Culpeper County Historical Society (which sponsored _Culpeper County Road Orders 1763-1764_); the Fairfax County History Commission (which sponsored _Fairfax County Road Orders 1749-1800_); Shenandoah University (which sponsored _Frederick County Road Orders 1743-1772_); and the New River Historical Society (which sponsored _Fincastle County Road Orders 1773-1776_ and _Montgomery County Road Orders 1777-1806_).

The location and transcription of the Loudoun County road orders were undertaken by independent researcher Patricia B. Duncan, as part of her ongoing research and publication of the early Loudoun County records. Final proofreading, formatting, and indexing were undertaken at the Virginia Center for Transportation Innovation and Research by Ann Brush Miller.

_Loudoun County Road Orders 1783-1800_, along with the previous volume _Loudoun County Road Orders 1757-1783_, covers the 18th century transportation records for an important portion of present-day Northern Virginia. Created from Fairfax County in 1757, Loudoun County is located in extreme north-central Virginia. To the east of Loudoun County is Fairfax County, and to the west, beyond the Blue Ridge Mountains, is the northern Shenandoah Valley. West Virginia (part of Virginia until 1863) lies northwest of Loudoun County, and to the north is the Potomac River, which forms Loudoun’s, as well as Virginia’s, northern boundary with Maryland and portions of West Virginia. To the south of Loudoun County are Prince William and Fauquier counties. By the second half of the 18th century, these various regions were connected by a number of major transportation corridors running through Loudoun County.

This volume is the twenty-ninth entry in the _Historic Roads of Virginia_ series, initiated in 1973 by the Virginia Highway & Transportation Research Council (subsequently the Virginia Transportation Research Council, and now the Virginia Center for Transportation Innovation and Research). _Loudoun County Road Orders 1783-1800_ is the fifth volume of published road orders to be concerned with the early transportation records of the northernmost portion of Virginia. It follows _Loudoun County Road Orders 1757-1783_, _Fairfax County Road Orders 1749-1800_, _Frederick County Road Orders 1743-1772_, and _Orange County Road Orders 1734-1749 (which included road orders for the period during which the northwestern portion of Virginia, west of the Blue Ridge Mountains, was part of Orange County, prior to 1745).
A NOTE ON THE METHODS, EDITING, AND DATING SYSTEM

by

Nathaniel Mason Pawlett
(Faculty Research Historian, Virginia Transportation Research Council, 1973-1995)

The road and bridge orders contained in the order books of an early Virginia county are the primary source of information for the study of its roads. When extracted, indexed, and published by the Virginia Transportation Research Council, they greatly facilitate this. All of the early county court order books are in manuscript, sometimes so damaged and faded as to be almost indecipherable. Usually rendered in the rather ornate script of the time, the phonetic spellings of this period often serve to complicate matters further for the researcher and recorder.

With these road orders available in an indexed and cross-indexed published form, it will be possible to produce chronological chains of road orders illustrating the development of many of the early roads of a vast area from the threshold of settlement through much of the eighteenth century. Immediate corroboration for these chains of road orders will usually be provided by other evidence such as deeds, plats, and the Confederate Engineers maps. Often, in fact, the principal roads will be found to survive in place under their early names.

With regard to the general editorial principles of the project, it has been our perception over the years as the road orders of Louisa, Hanover, Goochland, Albemarle, and other counties have been examined and recorded that road orders themselves are really a variety of “notes,” often cryptic, incomplete, or based on assumptions concerning the level of knowledge of the reader. As such, any further abstracting or compression of them would tend to produce “notes” taken from “notes,” making them even less comprehensible. The tendency has, therefore, been in the direction of restraint in editing, leaving any conclusions with regard to meaning up to the individual reader or researcher using these publications. In pursuing this course, we have attempted to present the reader with a typescript text that is as near a type facsimile of the manuscript itself as we can come.

Our objective is to produce a text that conveys as near the precise form of the original as we can, reproducing all the peculiarities of the eighteenth-century orthography. While some compromises have had to be made because of the modern keyboard, this was really not that difficult a task. Most of their symbols can be accommodated by modern typography, and most abbreviations are fairly clear as to meaning.

Punctuations may appear misleading at times, with unnecessary commas or commas placed where periods should be located; appropriate terminal punctuation is often missing or else takes the form of a symbol such as a long dash, etc. The original capitalization has been retained insofar as it was possible to determine from the original manuscript whether capitals were intended. No capitals have been inserted in place of those originally omitted. The original spelling and syntax have been retained throughout, even including the obvious errors in various places, such as repetitions of words and simple clerical errors. Ampersands have been retained throughout to include such forms as “&c” for “etc.” Superscript letters have also been retained where used in ye, yt, sd. The thorn symbol (y), pronounced as “th,” has been retained in the aforesaid “ye,” pronounced “the,” and “yt” (that). The tailed “p” (resembling a capital “p” with the tail extended into a loop) has also been retained. This symbol has no counterpart in modern typography; given the limits of the modern keyboard, we have rendered it as a capital “p” (P). This should be taken to mean either “per” (by), “pre,” or “pro” (sometimes “par” as in “Pish” for parish) as the context by the order may demand. For damaged and missing portions of the manuscripts we have used square brackets to denote the [missing], [torn], or [illegible] portions. Because of the large number of ancient forms of spelling, grammar, and syntax, it has been deemed impracticable to insert the form [sic] after each one to indicate a literal rendering. Therefore, the reader must assume that apparent errors are merely the result of our literal transcription of the road orders, barring the introduction of typographical errors, of course. If, in any case, this appears to present insuperable problems, resort should be made to the original records.

As to dating, most historians and genealogists who have worked with early Virginian records will be aware of the English dating system in use down to 1752. Although there was an eleven-day difference from our calendar in the day of the month, the principal difference lay in the fact that the beginning of the year was dated from March 25 rather than January 1, as was the case from 1752 onward to the present. Thus, January, February, and March (to the 25th) were the last three months in a given year, and the new year came in only on March 25.

Early Virginian records usually follow this practice, though in some cases dates during these three months will be shown in the form 1732/3, showing both the English date and that in use on the Continent, where the year began January 1. For researchers using material with dates in the English style, it is important to remember that under this system (for instance) a man might die in January 1734 yet convey property or serve in public office in June 1734, since June came before January in a given year under this system.
INTRODUCTION

by

Ann Brush Miller

The roads are under the government of the county courts, subject to be controled by the general court. They order whenever they think them necessary. The inhabitants of the county are by them laid off into precincts, to each of which they allot a convenient portion of the public roads to be kept in repair. Such bridges as may be built without the assistance of artificers, they are to be built. If the stream be such as to require a bridge of regular workmanship, the court employs workmen to build it, at the expense of the whole county. If it be too great for the county, application is made to the general assembly, who authorize individuals to build it, and to take a fixed toll from all passengers, or give sanction to such other proposition as to them appears reasonable.

—Thomas Jefferson, Notes on the State of Virginia, 1781

The establishment and maintenance of public roads were among the most important functions of the county court during the colonial period in Virginia. Each road was opened and maintained by an Overseer of the Highways appointed by the Gentlemen Justices yearly. He was usually assigned all the “Labouring Male Titheables” living on or near the road for this purpose. These individuals then furnished all their own tools, wagons, and teams and were required to labor for six days each year on the roads.

Major projects, such as bridges over rivers, demanding considerable expenditure were executed by commissioners appointed by the court to select the site and to contract with workmen for the construction. Where bridges connected two counties, a commission was appointed by each and they cooperated in executing the work.

Loudoun County Road Orders 1783-1800, like its predecessor volume Loudoun County Road Orders 1757-1783, covers early transportation records for an important portion of present-day northern Virginia. Created from the western portion of Fairfax County in 1757, Loudoun County occupies a significant location in the extreme north-central portion of Virginia. To the east of Loudoun County is Fairfax County, and to the west, beyond the Blue Ridge Mountains, are Clarke County (part of Frederick County during the 18th century) and the other counties of the northern Shenandoah Valley. South of Loudoun County are Prince William and Fauquier counties. West Virginia (part of Virginia until 1863) lies northwest of Loudoun County, and to the north is the Potomac River, which is Loudoun’s, as well as Virginia’s, northern boundary with Maryland.

At its creation and for most of the 18th century, Loudoun County included, in addition to its present territory, a portion of present day Fairfax County. The original boundary line between Fairfax and Loudoun ran along Difficult Run, several miles to the east of the current boundary; the present boundary line is the result of the 1798 boundary adjustment between those counties.

By the last half of the 18th century, Loudoun County was already one of the most populous and economically important counties in northern Virginia, and it contained major east-west and north-south transportation routes. Various ferry crossings of the Potomac River connected roads between Loudoun County and Maryland, and south from Loudoun roads ran further into Virginia and ultimately to the Carolinas. Also, roads from Loudoun ran westward through the Blue Ridge Mountains to the Shenandoah Valley and points farther west, and east to port towns such as Colchester and Alexandria.

The county’s early transportation records provide important information relating not only to transportation connections with neighboring counties and other southern counties in Virginia but also with the Washington, D.C., region and the adjoining states of Maryland and what is now West Virginia. The road orders contained in the first volume of this series covered the period from the creation of Loudoun County in 1757 through the end of the American Revolution (to the end of Order Book G in mid-1783). The current volume covers the period from mid-1783 (beginning with Order Book H) through 1800. These orders comprise much of the principal extant evidence concerning the early development of roads over an important area of northern Virginia, and adjoining regions, during the last half of the 18th century.

The road as it now runs is greatly injurious to the said Smarr because there is a great scarcity of timber on his land and this road by Obliging him to keep up a Lane makes him require several hundred of panels more of fencing than he otherwise would need and it should be Continued he must in a few years be entirely without timber. this road is of an Additional Injury to the said Smarr in dividing & Cutting into two parts his plantation, besides the injury and inconvenience necessarily resulting to a farmer who lives on the road the way proposed will be of no injury to any one because it will be along a road that is now kept open by private Consent and Chiefly on lines It will be nearer for the travellers going from North to South or from South to North perhaps a quarter of a Mile and it is the way they now usually travell. It will be turning the travellers going from East to West & from West to East nearly as far about but they are very few perhaps not one tenth of the number that travell the other road. We know of no Other Conveniences or inconveniences resulting either to Individuals or the Publick from the proposed Way Carters line as it is divides the leased land of Smarr from Greenleases fee simple land then said Smarr’s land from Thomas Floods fee simple land, then said Smarr’s land from Joseph Laceys and the balance of the way is tho’ the fee simple land of Joseph Lacey. Ch’s. Lewis, John Danniell, Joseph Lewis.” Ordered that John Moore, James Greenlees, Joseph Lacey & Thomas Flood be summoned to appear here at January Court next to shew cause if any they have, why the said road should not be turned agreeable to report.

That the ground appears to us to be good except a draft which comes out of one of the said Roszells fields that the said Draft appears to be not more than twenty feet wide that the distance of the proposed way is said to be about half a mile farther than the way proposed by Samuel Canby. It appears to us that the proposed way is by far the best ground for a road, and that it will save the neighbours at least one mile and one quarter in working the road should the way proposed be Established. Should the Old road be continued it will we conceive Injure the Lands of the said Nichols considerably and the Benefit to the publick will not be material as we are informed that the waggons generally go down the turnpike and take a road that goes near the Line upon which the new road is proposed to go, not regarding the distance, the road being so much better, and that we think it will be equally good if put upon the line except above mentioned. Report of the Road petitioned for by John Alexander Binns leading from his Mill to Waterford returned in the words following, to wit, “In respect to the road to lead from Jn. A. Binns’ Mill to Waterford, the most convenient that appears to us for this Road, is to go from Binns’s Mill through his Land over his mill dam there is a Steep Bank near his mill house and also on each side his Mill dam which he informed us he would cut down and make a good Road for his own convenience, thence from the said Mill dam through Conrod Tritipau’s Land to Reuben Hixons Land where Benjamin Hixon now lives and through the said Hixon’s Field and Orchard (the said Reuben Hixon informed Edmond Jennings and Thomas Hough undersigned, (that he did not object to the road going through his Field on account of its going through his orchard) And by the House to a pair of Barrs letting out into a Lane which is about 160 yards across said Field their along the said Lane to another Field of said Hixon’s then leaving the same and through this Field down a Valley to the Lower side of the Field and to the woods, to an old road leading to Waterford across the said Field is about 220 yards and along the said Valley through the Field will be a Tolerable good road—But a road may be made around this Field, but we conceive it will be expensive owing to the Steepness of the Hill and from the said Hixon’s Field along said Old road passing through John Hough deceased Marget Howell, Andrew Brown’s and William Hough’s Land and to his Fence from thence the best way will be for this road to pass through the said William Hough’s Feild down by his meadow Fence to an Old orchard and through the Orchard by a house into a good waggon Road in a Lane leading directly to Waterford by said William Hough’s Dwelling house a good Road may be made round the said Hough’s Meadow Fence without going through his field but it will be expensive to keep in repair owing to its passing between his Meadow Fence and Ketocton Creek on Low wet ground and we suppose will be near a fourth of a Mile further it is a bout two hundred & thirty four yards through the said Hough’s Field into the road before mentioned.” Ordered that the Sheriff do summon Conrod Tritipau, Reuben Hixon, Benjamin Hixon, William Hough, Samuel Hough and Mahlon Hough Executors of John Hough deceased, Marget Howell, Andrew Brown & William Hough to Shew cause if any they have why the said Road Should not be opened accordingly.

Thomas Hough one of the undersigners gives his consent for the road to be opened on the line of his Land before mentioned & described along the said Line will admit of a very Good road but the old road may be continued through his Land untill it comes to the road leading from said Hough’s Mill, and across it through William Hough’s Land untill it Joins the road leading to said Hollingsworth’s Mill, but this road will not be so near nor so good as the way we have recommended for it to be made in the said Thomas Hough’s Line. INDEX

This index is arranged by subject: Bridges and Causeways; Churches, Chapels, Glebes, Meeting Houses, and Parishes; County, Virginia, and U.S. Government; Ferries; Fords; Land Features; Mills, Mill Dams, and Mill Races; Miscellaneous Subjects (houses, landmarks, neighborhoods, plantations, quarters, stores, towns, etc.); Ordinaries and Taverns; Personal Names; Rivers, Runs, Springs, Creeks, and Other Water Features; Roads.

[Note: In this index, a question mark after a word or group of words signifies that what precedes it appears possible or probable but is not absolutely specified or legible in the text of the order book entry. A question mark is also used in a few cases where the spelling of a word or a name is partly, but not completely, legible. For example, see “Bettz[or Bellz?] ferry over the Potomack” indexed under Ferries.

A number in parentheses after a page number indicates the number of entries for the index subject on that page.

A word or group of words in parentheses indicates additional information on the subject from the text. For example, see “clearing (debris from?) Broad Run bridge” indexed under Bridges and Causeways. A word or group of words in brackets indicates additional information on that subject inferred from the text but not actually stated in the text. For example, see “line of Frederick [County] at Key’s Gap” indexed under County, Virginia, and U.S. Government.

The 18th century Loudoun County Order Books exhibit some unusual conventions, particularly for possessives: in names ending with an “s,” the possessive is often indicated by an apostrophe before the final “s” (for example, the possessive for the name “Nichols” is often given as “Nichol’s” or simply “Nichols” rather than “Nichols’” or “Nichols’s”). Although considerable care was exercised to identify the correct names for this index, in cases where researchers have questions, they are urged to check spellings against those in other contemporary sources.]

Roads

[Note: Roads are cross-indexed to all locations and persons mentioned. Descriptions were somewhat standardized to simplify the preparation of this index. The key word for each entry is underlined. Where several sections or descriptions are given for a road, the page number for the earliest entry was used to determine the indexing order, even if the key word appeared in a subsequent entry. Where only surnames are given, these entries appear first in the entries under that surname. It should be noted that the Loudoun County clerk of this era recorded some of the most detailed road order entries encountered in the more than 40-year history of the Historic Roads of Virginia project, resulting in unusually long road descriptions. It is hoped that these extremely detailed descriptions will be of particular use to researchers in identifying early roads in this area.

For roads prior to mid-1783, see also the previous volume, Loudoun County Road Orders 1757-1783.]
