Augusta County Road Orders 1745-1769 is one of several compilations of early Virginia road orders left unfinished by Nathaniel Mason Pawlett, longtime Faculty Research Historian of the Virginia Transportation Research Council, at his death in 1995. Mr. Pawlett began work on the first volumes of published Virginia road orders in the early 1970s and over the next twenty years produced more than dozen volumes of road order transcriptions and histories of Virginia roads.

A number of individuals worked together to complete this volume. Tyler Jefferson Boyd assisted Mr. Pawlett in the initial work on the transcription of the Augusta County road orders. I, as principal historian, completed this volume with Kenneth Madison Clark and Thomas Llewellyn Samuel, Jr.

We are particularly indebted to the late Katherine Gentry Bushman (Mrs. William Bushman) of Staunton, Virginia, one of the greatest authorities on Shenandoah Valley history, for her long-term interest and encouragement regarding this project, and for her assistance in deciphering some of the vagaries of spelling and handwriting of the early Augusta county clerks. Sadly, Mrs. Bushman did not live to see the publication of this work, which we dedicate to her memory.

This volume is the nineteenth entry in the Historic Roads of Virginia series, initiated by the Virginia Transportation Research Council (then the Virginia Highway & Transportation Research Council) in 1973. Augusta County Road Orders 1745-1769 is also the first volume of published road orders to be concerned wholly with territory west of the Blue Ridge, although portions of the Shenandoah Valley were covered by a previous publication, Orange County Road Orders 1734-1749, which included the period the territory was part of Orange County, prior to 1745.
The road and bridge orders contained in the order books of an early Virginia county are the primary source of information for the study of its roads. When extracted, indexed, and published by the Virginia Transportation Research Council, they greatly facilitate this. All of the early county court order books are in manuscript, sometimes so damaged and faded as to be almost indecipherable. Usually rendered in the rather ornate script of the time, the phonetic spellings of this period often serve to complicate matters further for the researcher and recorder.

With these road orders available in an indexed and cross-indexed published form, it will be possible to produce chronological chains of road orders illustrating the development of many of the early roads of a vast area from the threshold of settlement through much of the eighteenth century. Immediate corroboration for these chains of road orders will usually be provided by other evidence such as deeds, plats, and the Confederate Engineers maps. Often, in fact, the principal roads will be found to survive in place under their early names.

With regard to the general editorial principles of the project, it has been our perception over the years as the road orders of Louisa, Hanover, Goochland, Albemarle, and other counties have been examined and recorded that road orders themselves are really a variety of “notes,” often cryptic, incomplete, or based on assumptions concerning the level of knowledge of the reader. As such, any further abstracting or compression of them would tend to produce “notes” taken from “notes,” making them even less comprehensible. The tendency has, therefore, been in the direction of restraint in editing, leaving any conclusions with regard to meaning up to the individual reader or researcher using these publications. In pursuing this course, we have attempted to present the reader with a typescript text that is as near a type facsimile of the manuscript itself as we can come.

Our objective is to produce a text that conveys as near the precise form of the original as we can, reproducing all the peculiarities of the eighteenth-century orthography. While some compromises have had to be made because of the modern keyboard, this was really not that difficult a task. Most of their symbols can be accommodated by modern typography, and most abbreviations are fairly clear as to meaning.

Punctuations may appear misleading at times, with unnecessary commas or commas placed where periods should be located; appropriate terminal punctuation is often missing or else takes the form of a symbol such as a long dash, etc. The original capitalization has been retained insofar as it was possible to determine from the original manuscript whether capitals were intended. No capitals have been inserted in place of those originally omitted. The original spelling and syntax have been retained throughout, even including the obvious errors in various places, such as repetitions of words and simple clerical errors. Ampersands have been retained throughout to include such forms as “&c” for “etc.” Superscript letters have also been retained where used in yᵉ, yᵗ, sᵈ. The thorn symbol (ȝ), pronounced as "th," has been retained in the aforesaid “yᵉ,” pronounced “the,” and “yᵗ” (that), along with the tailed p (ƿ) which the limitations of the modern keyboard have forced us to render as a capital "p" (P). This should be taken to mean either “per” (by), “pre,” or “pro” (sometimes “par” as in “Pish” for parish) as the context by the order may demand. For damaged and missing portions of the manuscripts we have used square brackets to denote the [missing], [torn] or [illegible] portions. Because of the large number of ancient forms of spelling, grammar, and syntax, it has been deemed impracticable to insert the form [sic] after each one to indicate a literal rendering. Therefore, the reader must assume that apparent errors are merely the result of our literal transcription of the road orders, barring the introduction of typographical errors, of course. If, in any case, this appears to present insuperable problems, resort should be made to the original records.

As to dating, most historians and genealogists who have worked with early Virginian records will be aware of the English dating system in use down to 1752. Although there was an eleven-day difference from our calendar in the day of the month, the principal difference lay in the fact that the beginning of the year was dated from March 25 rather than January 1, as was the case from 1752 onward to the present. Thus, January, February, and March (to the 25th) were the last three months in a given year, and the new year came in only on March 25.

Early Virginian records usually follow this practice, though in some cases dates during these three months will be shown in the form 1732/3, showing both the English date and that in use on the Continent, where the year began January 1. For researchers using material with dates in the English style, it is important to remember that under this system (for instance) a man might die in January 1734 yet convey property or serve in public office in June 1734, since June came before January in a given year under this system.
INTRODUCTION

by

Nathaniel Mason Pawlett

The roads are under the government of the county courts, subject to be controuled by the general court. They order whenever they think them necessary. The inhabitants of the county are by them laid off into precincts, to each of which they allot a convenient portion of the public roads to be kept in repair. Such bridges as may be built without the assistance of artificers, they are to be built. If the stream be such as to require a bridge of regular workmanship, the court employs workmen to build it, at the expense of the whole county. If it be too great for the county, application is made to the general assembly, who authorize individuals to build it, and to take a fixed toll from all passengers, or give sanction to such other proposition as to them appears reasonable.

Thomas Jefferson, Notes on the State of Virginia, 1781

The establishment and maintenance of public roads were among the most important functions of the county court during the colonial period in Virginia. Each road was opened and maintained by an Overseer of the Highways appointed by the Gentlemen Justices yearly. He was usually assigned all the “Labouring Male Titheables” living on or near the road for this purpose. These individuals then furnished all their own tools, wagons, and teams and were required to labour for six days each year on the roads.

Major projects, such as bridges over rivers, demanding considerable expenditure were executed by commissioners appointed by the court to select the site and to contract with workmen for the construction. Where bridges connected two counties, a commission was appointed by each and they cooperated in executing the work.

At its creation from Orange County in 1745, Augusta County extended from the Blue Ridge to “the utmost limits of Virginia.” Although legislated into existence along with Frederick County in 1738, Augusta did not commence operation until 1745 when it was felt it had sufficient population to support a government.

From 1745 to 1770, Augusta was a giant parent county, although early nibbled by the creation in 1754 from it of Hampshire County (now West Virginia). Indeed, what is strange is that it maintained as much of its territory as it did until 1770. Much of this must be attributed to the turmoil of the French and Indian War and its retarding effect on settlement.
The road orders contained in this volume cover the period from 1745, when Augusta’s county government became operational, down to the creation of Botetourt from it in 1770. As such, they are the principal extant evidence concerning the early development of roads over a vast area of western Virginia from the Blue Ridge to the furthest reaches of settlement.
THE DEVELOPMENT OF AUGUSTA COUNTY

Note: As originally published in paper format, this volume included maps showing the evolution of the county. These maps are not included in the revised/electronic version due to legibility and file size considerations. Instead, a verbal description is provided.

Prior to 1720, a small portion of the area that later became Augusta County was included within newly-formed Spotsylvania County, which included the present counties of Spotsylvania, Orange, Greene, Culpeper, Madison, and Rappahannock east of the Blue Ridge Mountains, and a portion of the Shenandoah Valley as far west as the Shenandoah River.

In 1734, Orange County was created from Spotsylvania County. A giant county at its formation, Orange included the present-day counties of Orange, Greene, Culpeper, Madison, and Rappahannock east of the Blue Ridge Mountains, as well as the territory west of the mountains extending, at least nominally, to the Mississippi River. A 1738 enabling act provided for the creation of two new counties, Frederick and Augusta, from that part of Orange west of the Blue Ridge. This was to take effect as soon as there was sufficient settlement in the region: the first court of Frederick County was held in 1743; Augusta County’s government became operational in 1745.

Augusta County’s original territory included most of western and southwestern Virginia, as well as most of what would become the state of West Virginia, the future state of Kentucky, and theIllinois territory. Major reductions to Augusta’s territory included the creations of the counties of Hampshire (1754) and Botetourt (1770), and the loss of the other far western lands of the county (the creation of Yohogania, Monongalia, and Ohio counties from the District of West Augusta in 1776 and the creation of Illinois County in 1778). The subsequent creations of the counties of Rockingham and Rockbridge (both 1778), Pendleton (1788), and Bath (1791) brought Augusta County to its current boundaries.

Roads
[Note: Roads are cross-indexed to all locations and persons mentioned. Spellings and descriptions have been standardized to aid in identifying roads and to simplify the preparation of this index. This was a necessity as many road descriptions changed slightly in the orders as different landmarks were cited. The reader should also keep in mind that various roads went under similar general designations and should bear this in mind when determining the identity of each road.]
